Frequently Asked Questions

- 1. What Is a Reasonable Accommodation? A reasonable accommodation is an adjustment or change that helps you perform the essential functions of your job or access the workplace.
- 2. What is the Interactive Process? The interactive process is a collaborative conversation between you, Human Resources, and Unum to determine an effective accommodation. This process includes reviewing your request, discussing job responsibilities, exploring accommodation options and making adjustments if needed over time. If an accommodation is not effective, you may request a review or modification.
- 3. Do I have to say “ADA” to request help? No. Any request for workplace support related to a medical condition may trigger the ADA process.
- 4. How long does the process take? Timelines vary based on documentation and complexity, but requests are reviewed as promptly as possible.
- 5. Can my accommodation be denied? Some requests may not be reasonable or feasible, but alternative options will be explored whenever possible.
- 6. Will requesting an accommodation affect my job? No. Retaliation is prohibited
